STAT

Please excuse the tardiness of this reply to your letter of September 11. I have been away attending a conference in Amsterdam.

I myself have not done any research on the physical and psychological factors that affect an individual's ability to concentrate on repetitious observations through a microscope. There is a literature on this problem, I'm sure, but I would have to do some hunting to find it, and I gather from your letter that you don't want me to do that. A man who might be able to give you some first-hand information on this problem is
